Concentrated Global Growth Fund

Fund Focus - February 2024

Market Commentary

Global stocks rose in February for the fourth-consecutive month. US stocks led the way, spurred by technology stocks that pushed the NASDAQ Composite Index to its first record high in more than two years. The S&P 500 Index also ended the month at a fresh high. The gains reflected investors' optimism that economic growth will continue amid policymakers' efforts to reduce inflation.

The S&P 500 Index ended the month having advanced 16 of the past 18 weeks, the first time that happened since 1971. Investors continued delaying expectations for the US Federal Reserve's first rate cut since it stopped raising rates last year. Most investors now expect a rate cut in June. The US economy added 353,000 jobs in January, keeping the US unemployment rate steady at 3.7%.

Equities in most regions showed strength. European stocks advanced during the month but underperformed broader developed markets, while stocks in the UK were nearly flat. In Japan, equities rallied and outperformed broader non-US developed markets. Emerging markets stocks surged during February, essentially reversing their January losses.

Fund Commentary

In February, the Fund delivered an exceptional return of 7.21%, surpassing the impressive performance of the index. Moreover, year-to-date, the Fund continues to outpace the remarkable index return.

The key contributor to performance in February included Howmet Aerospace and ICON.

Howmet Aerospace - The stock gained in the month after Howmet reported earnings, revenues and profit margins for the fourth quarter and full year 2023 that exceeded consensus analysts' expectations, even against a backdrop of weakness in the aerospace and defence markets.

ICON - This Ireland-based health care company, which provides services to the pharmaceuticals and biotechnology industries, reported fourth-quarter revenues that increased year over year and reaffirmed its guidance for 2024.

The key detractors from performance included Cellnex Telecom, SBA Communications and Meta Platforms.

Cellnex Telecom - While Cellnex's stock finished down in February, at the end of the month the company reported a rise in annual revenues for 2023.

SBA Communications - This real estate company owns and leases cell towers and distributed antenna systems. Shares declined as investors reacted negatively to both quarterly earnings and forward guidance that did not meet consensus analysts' estimates.

Meta Platforms - The position in Facebook's parent company, Meta Platforms, weighed on relative performance. The investment team initiated the position during February and consequently did not fully benefit from the stock's rise in the month. However, the investment thesis remains intact.

Notable purchases in February included Meta Platforms and Xylem.

Meta Platforms - A position was initiated in Meta after it reported strong top- and bottom-line growth driven by strength in digital advertising, pricing power and cost discipline. The investment team believes the growth is sustainable, supported by both rising digital ad spending and product improvement, including artificial intelligence-led development.

Xylem - The stock was purchased following its acquisition of Evoqua Water Technologies. The acquisition combines Xylem, a global leader in water moving and measurement, with a domestic leader in water filtration. Government programs for domestic water infrastructure improvements should also benefit the company.
